'Twas Ever Thus.

"There's many a slip between the cup of the lip," is an old saying, and its and the lip," is an old saying, and its truth seems likely to be proved again in the case of the needle of Cleopatra, which the New York World says the khedive of Egypt will give to that city if she will take it. A gentleman has agreed to pay the cost of transportation, but it seems the obelisk was given away before. Says the Observatore Triestina, published at

Trieste, Austria:
"Of the two obelisks on the seashore at Alexandria, known as the 'needles of Cle-opatra,' the one that is upright has long been the property of the city of Trieste, and now that England has had the other shipped for London, the people of Trieste are proposing to get theirs. The English, years ago, wished to take both for the purpose of setting them up in Trafalgar square, but Herr Laurin, the Austrian consul, interposed objections, and as-serted and maintained the right of his native city city to the ownership of the one now remaining. The obelisk belonging to the English, which is now afloat on the sea in a cylinder and is being drawn by a steamer toward the British isles, will not cause an outlay for transportation of more respondent of the Observatore Triestina with the suggestion that the other obelisk can be brought to Trieste for even less. The experience gained in the transporta-tion of the English obelisk may be turned to advantage with ours; the same means of conveyance can be employed: the Khediye has promised the Austrian consul all the assistance in the shape of workmen that may be needed to get the obelisk to the sea; and the management of the Lloyd steamship company has volunteered to furnish a steamer. A subscription to meet the expense of the undertaking is on foot

In the Senate. [Washington letter.]

Senator Conkling looks in better health, but the golden glory of his hair is gone forever, even from the famous forelock. No man in public life has changed much personally in the same length of time as Mr. Blaine. It is but a few years, ago since he looked a young and hand-some man. Already he has the puffy appearance which marked Sumner in his last years—has the same swollen circles over-and under his eyes. He has grown stout. His hair has grown gray. His face and person have aged at least twenty years in ten. His whole presence tells of battles he has waged and not always won. His countenance shows the mental conflict through which he has passed. Remorse hurts some; to be found out hurts worse. Thurman looked much less muffled up than usual, as if both mumps and neural-gia had "sworn off" from him for the month of October. Stanley Matthews, looking as aggravatingly like Brigham Young as ever, sat as comfortably on his senatorial seat as if the rival images of Ewing and Pendleton did not loom in the democratic distance.

[Mack's Washington gossip.]

The statement is made very positively to-day that Senator Thurman, of Ohio, will resign January next, in order to allow the legislature to elect Mr. Ewing to the short term at the same time that it elects George H. Pendleton for a long term. In return for this action on his part, Thurman is pledged the unanimous support of Ohio for the democratic nomination in 1880. In conversation, Thurman admits the intended resignation, but denies that there is any agreement as to the support of him for president in 1880, These rumors have created a profound sensation among the democratics of Indiana, who are keeping Hendricks in training for 1880. They say they were cheated out of the nomination of Hendricks by the friends of Pendleton in 1868, and that they will not submit to be bull-bozed by Pendleton and Pendleton in 1868.

by Buckeyes any more.

Burgoyne.

[George William Curtis's peroration at the celebra-tion yesterday.] "Here to the England that we fought, let us now, grown great and strong with a hundred years, hold out the hand of fellowship and peace! Here, where the English Burgoyne, in the very moment of his bitter humiliation, generously pledged George Washington, let us, in our high hour of triumph, of power, and of hope, pledge the queen! Here, on the grave of brave and unknown foemen, may mutual jealousies and doubts and animosities lie buried forever! Henceforth, revering their common glorious traditions, may England and America press always forward side by side, in noble and inspiring rivalry to promote the welfare of man.

Here was the symbol of the revolution, a common cause, a common strife, a common triumph; the cause not of class, but of human nature—the triumph not of colony, but of United America. And we who stand here proudly remembering—we who stand here proudly remembering—we who have seen Virginia and New York—the north and the south—more bitterly hostile than the armies whose battles shook this ground—we who have mutually proved in deadlier conflict the constancy and the courage of all the states, which, proud to be peers, yet own no master but their united selves—we renew our heart's imperishable devotion to the common American faith, the common American pride, the common American glory!"

[Washington Letter.] As I was passing out of the house after weary day I encountered at the door Alexander Stephens, in a chair being convey-ed forth on the shoulders of two men. So in days past I often met his great antagonist and name-sake, Thaddeus Stevens, with a body as weak and a soul as strong, borne forth on the shoulders of other men. Remembering how near the grave last winter was Mr. Stephens, it seems impossible that he should have mortal breath and being now. Very little, and weak, and old he looked, yet his eyes still burn with their ancient fire, and his mind is as strong as if working through the brain of a gi-ant. Sitting in his seat in the house, he seemed much less feeble than he did a year ago. There was no hat, less cloak and considerable more man.

SPEAKER RANDALL has a fine chance to make a spoon or spoil a horn.

POSTMASTER FILLEY, of St. Louis, according to report, has been using United States mail wagons to haul voters to the polls, and otherwise conducting himself as if he wanted to be instructed as to whether he is a vassal or a peer. THE hundredth anniversary of Burgoyne's surrender was celebrated yesterday at Schuylerville, New York, by an immense concourse of people, which fired salutes, paraded and listened to addresses by Horatio Seymour and George William Curtis. The latter's effort was one of the finest of the many he has placed to his credit on the record of fame. The peroration might take rank among the classics.

THE change in the face of affairs in the east recalls the early days of the war. The Russians have given Mukhtar Pasha a tremendous thrashing in Asia Minor, shattering his army in pieces and cooping him up in Kars. In Europe activity around Plevna is announced, and doleful reports come from the beleagured city of the extremities of the Turks. On the other hand the weather has made the roads impassible and has brought disease, which make privation and death among the Russians. "He wins who can pound longest."

THEY are to approve or disapprove by popular vote in Switzerland in a few days law passed by the last parliament for the protection of workingmen. It is as broad as the most sanguine "citizen of the world" would require. It is a factory law which brings any establishment where any number of working people are regularly employed within its scope. No factory will be allowed to work more than eleven bours in twenty-four, except by special permission. No new factory can be built or an old one altered without a submission of the plans to the Cantonal authorities and their permission. The buildings must be properly ventillated, lighted and rendered comfortable "by every precaution of which science has revealed the necessity or taught the practicability." Every factory must have its rules approved by the Cantonal authorities and the employed before they can be valid. Minute records must be kept of every person employed. Fines to go to the benefit of the employed. Minute directions hedge in every kind of work. Married women are to be allowed an extra half hour at noon, and so forth and so on to the smallest details. If this law is passed though the results may be easily guessed at, it will be interesting to watch them.

SINCE the Ohio election and the Hendricks reception the Journal has been treating its readers to doses of the old regulation campaign-slander stuff-allopathic doses, large and nauseating. They concern everything and everybody democratic. Abusive epithets, representations and misrepresentations are hurled with a recklessness which betokens more love for a row than for the truth. It accuses Governor Hendricks of being a church member and insinuates that he teaches a class in Sunday school and solemnly assures him for about the thousandth time in the last ten years that he has been "slaughtered in the house of his friends." It abuses Mr. Julian generally, seeming to reckon as his worst offence his loyalty to the union and his expressed desire during the war to see the christless rebels licked out of their boots. Really the worst thing it says of him is that he writes the Sentinel's editorials-a base slander we take it. Abusing the democracy it goes blind with rage, so that in one column it denies with a free flow of billingsgate that which it asserts in another. Thus: Belaboring the Indiana democracy it informs it that it is only I though it be less than he expected. The the tail of the party; that cry of fraud does, not guide party, but that the southern democracy, which is its body and soul takes its stand on the higher ground surveyed for it by Aleek Stephens, and gives proof of this stand by its election of Mr. Randall. In another column devoted to damning Randall it says he represents the worst school of politics, and all the worst elements of the democracy; that he has worked his way by corrupt arts to the front rank of a corrupt party, and "on this account" is elected to the speakership. As Mr. Watterson would say, "It is so easy to bandy epithets, to squib and fib."

How They Do It in France.

To an American familiar with the campaign processes and calculations of our elections, the estimates of what this state will do, and that one can't do, and how many congressmen the republicans will lose and what the democratic chances of the next legislature and federal senatorship are, it is rather interesting to get behind the bare announcements of the cable into the particulars of the French election calculations, what one saw and the other expected, what the consequences would be if either succeeded or was disappointed, and what analogy human nature would maintain between two nations so differently constituted when so similarly situated as the French and Americans on the eve of an election. The New York Herald furnishes the means, in a measure, of making this inquisition, in a two-page dispatch from Paris giving the results of interviews with the leading statesmen and editors of the republican and government parties touching the prospects and effects of the election which was to take place the next day. It may be that the dispatch was largely compounded in New York, of brief hints by the cable diffused into elaborate sketches, but there is no doubt some substance of truth in it if a could deal of shrewd guessing as well. Reports are given of what some forty leading men thought on three points, how the elections would result, what action would follow, and what M. Grevy's chances were. It is rather amusing to see how very like American politicians French politicians are, and how surely party inclinations fix opinions of results. The republicans like Grevy and Victor Hugo and Gambetta and Girardin and Jules Simon counted confidently on the return of 380 to 420 republican deputies, or a positive increase of strength of 20 to 60 members over the now celebrated 363 who voted the government down and got dissolved for it. The majority ranged along about 400, Grevy's dropping to 380 or 390 and Hugo poetically going up to 420, or about 100 mere than the polls showed to support poetry. The conservatives differed of course about as widely as well informed republicans would differ from democrats here. Rouher, the longest headed man in France since Thiers died, thought the government would gain 80 members, not a majority. Bishop Dupanloup thought the government could not get a majority, but might; Duke D'Audiffret-Pasquier believed the government would gain enough to give the balance of power to the left center; the duellist and imperialist Paul de Cassagnac said the government would get enough to hold 230, or a gain of 70; M. Villemessant, of Figaro, erally and confidently. They got 314 and will have finally 335, a clear loss of 28 instead of a gain of nearly 40. The conservatives counted on gaining from 80 to 100, and actually gained 43. The former guessed wrong by about 70, the latter by 40 to 60. The government estimates were generally the more moderate, and as a rule the moderate estimates are the most likely to come out of the ballot boxes. The adherents of the president had the best chance to guess in having control of the election officers and the local agencies through which popular feeling could be either ascertained or controlled. The republicans generally thought that their victory would force the president out of the way, and make a final settlement of all dynastic and constitutional questions by a firm and moderate republic. The Duke d'Audiffret Pasquier, who is a moderate republican inclining to the Orleans party, thought the effect of the elections would be to make the left center, or moderate republicans, 'masters of the situation." So thought Mr. Bapst; of Des Debats, a republican paper, and M. Veuillot, the fiery ultramontane, who would burn the country alive to carry a point for the papacy; and M. Hebrard, of Le Temps, republican, manifestly a cautious and therefore a safe man. The opinion that the upshot of the matter would be, sooner or later, a restoration of the Bonaparte dynasty was universal among the editors and leading men of that faction, by all odds the strongest that supports MacMahon, and virtually the only party in the country except the republican. But nobody, even of the legitimists, appeared to think of the restoration of the Bourbons in either branch. As neither the republicans nor conservatives have done what they expected in the elections, it is reasonable to conclude that neither will do what it expected to have power to do from the elections president will not hurry a collision to make another dissolution, for the republican strength is too manifest to be prudently assailed without thorough preparation. The republi-

It was said by our dispatches yesterday that the government meant to make a special effort to carry the election of arondissment counsellors and general counsellors next month, these being the electors of senators and one chance of balancing the republican ascendancy in the chamber. Success here would seem likely to strengthen the equality of the antagonists and the chances of a compromise. As to M. Grevy as the successor of MacMahon few treated the suggestion with any consideration.

Mr. Bagby and Concert Saloons.

Mr. Bagby and Concert Saloons.

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News:

In an editorial in yesterday's issue of The News on the subject of concert saloons, you do me injustice by assuming that I favor the establishment and toleration of the dens of infamy you describe. No inference could be more at variance with fact. I am as decidedly opposed to the toleration of the haunts of iniquity you speak of as any man in our community. As a matter of fact, however, concert saloons in some form exist in all of our large cities despite the laws against them and the efforts of the authorities to suppress them. It is a question in the minds of many whether it would not be better to recognize the inevitable and, as in the case of the liquor traffic, attempt by rigid legislation to regulate the establishment and management of these places, and thus mitigate the evils resulting from them, rather than pursue the futile course of the past, which, in most cases, has resulted in allowing the proprietors to pursue their own will. In Germany, I am informed concert halls in which beer is sold are common, and are regarded by the law and the people generally as legitimate places of recreation and amusement. From this land ex-Mayor Medill, of Chicago, wrote a few years ago: "Drunkenas legitimate places of recreation and amuse-ment. From this land ex-Mayor Medill, of Chicago, wrote a few years ago: "Drunken-ness as seen in America is almost entirely unness as seen in America is almost entirely anknown here." It is not strange then that the Germans, coming from a land in which these places were considered ligitimate and harmless, should seek to establish places of similar character in their new home.

character in their new home.

Now since it has been found impossible to prevent the establishment of concert saloons owing to the fact that they are demanded and patronized by so many, it is a question with me whether it would not be better to regulate them by rigid legislation which would leave in existence those only which we free in existence those only which are free from the vice of prostitution. On this question many, having in view the same ultimate object, differ widely and honestly. In supporting the ordinance prepared by the city attorney at the suggestion of the council, I believed that its rigid execution would result believed that its rigid execution would result in the suppression of the "dens of iniquity" you abhor and condemn not more utterly and severely than myself. If, as Mr. Marsec claims, with the endorsement of The News, "concert saloons can not exist twenty minutes under a rigid enforcement of the clause of the law prohibiting the presence of lewd women," then all will have been accomplished that any opponent could wish—their extinction. I make no claim of infallibility for the views I hold, and though they are the result

I make no claim of infallibility for the views I hold, and though they are the result of a careful study of the subject, I should not have obtruded them upon the attention of the public but for the false position in which your editorial places me.

However widely my opinion on the subject may differ from your own, you will do me the credit to admit that a like opinion is held the credit to admit that a like opinion is near by many good men who are sincerely and devotedly attached to the cause of temper-ance and morality, and who would spurn as indignantly as yourself any proposition "to saddle on to the city licensed prostitution." By inserting the above in the next issue of The News you will greatly oblige, Yours truly,

ROBERT B. BAGBY. Indianapolis, October 17, [Mr. Bagby is at great pains to affirm that which he is careful to deny. We can not see but that he strongly establishes himself in the position The News ascribed to him. If he is satisfied that he has not, we are. take it as a slander on the Germans, however, that it is they who want concert halls established. Concert halls in Germany are no more akin to the concert halls which come within the purview of the ordinance Mr. Bag. by voted for than a flower is to a weed .-- Ed.

Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alterative, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake, with the lodides of Potassium and Iron, makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermines health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy.

AYER'S ARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Eryspicias, Finples, Pustules, Biotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringwarm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatisun, Neuralgis, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhe arising from internal ulceration and urine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. The twenty-second anniversary of the Pythonian society will be held at Irvington Friday evening. Prof. Allen Thrasher will address the society on behalf of the alumni. Wm. Coroner Wishard this afternoon investigated the leath of a six weeks old negro baby on Indiana wenue, near the canal, and finding everything regular declined holding an inquest.

The state house commissioners opened the bids for the sale of the old capitol at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The absence of McKean and Morris prevented this being done at the morning session. The Opera house band is still playing the same tunes from in front of the theater with which that establishment was christened when first built. The menotony is beginning to tell on people in the neighborhood.

Mary A. Irwin wants a divorce from James H. Irwin. In the complainant it is set up that the defendant is a drunkard, and that since 1889 "he has refused and failed to discharge any of the duties incumbent upon him as a husband."

As the line of march of the 11th Indiana and military is on South Meridian street, it is suggested that the merchants hang their star-spangled banners on the outer wall. The reception of the Crawfordsville and Terre Haute visitors will be on this street.

He is not thought to be the principal and may prove his entire innocence. The investigation is continuing today.

The Art School Opening.

The Art School Opening.

The reception at the art school to-morrow night will form an era in the history of Indianapolis, and will be a fact in which every citizen ought to rejoice. The brilliant display of paintings by living and by dead artists, both of Europe and America, and the casts from the antique, all contribute to make representative productions of both painting and sculpture which span over the space of more than 2,000 years. I have now had the privilege of seeing this collection both by daylight and by gas light, to see the rooms busy with pupils, working under the direction of the professors in the midst of classic busts, bas reliefs, and statues (some of which date back to the age of Percices and come down to the age of Hadrian), and I have seen these same rooms brilliantly illuminated when tenanted by only a few living ones, but were full of the mimic life of past and surviving artists. The effect is most satisfactory, and I prophesy a rare treat to the visitors to-morrow evening. I was glad to learn that the projectors have made arrasgements for some of the fine European paintings, the Pompeian bronzes and water-color drawings belonging to the collections of Mr. R. L. McOuat and Mr. Albert Fletcher. The latter possesses some fruit pieces painted by Recco, in Italy, nearly two hundred years ago. I was also greatly pleased to see that Prof. Gookins will have on view one of the few of his magnificent land-scapes which survived the disastrous fire of Chicago. Anyone can see that that glant American Alp, the "Lost Canyon," is a migestic object, painted under the clear light of a non-day sun, and standing out in relief against a sky as blue as that of Italy. It is painted with a masterly hand.

Much more would I say, but "seeing is believing," and many will come away from the art reception with faith in the art school, which has already begun under such happy auspices. The only regret is that the vast rooms are not larger, because the invitations are, therefore, necessarily limited. But I am informed

An Important Capture.

Detectives Charles W. Page and Zack Kehoe made an important capture this morning at 11:30 o'clock. Three well-dressed nobby young men were spotted by Kehoe this morning figuring around the South Illinois-street scalping establishments, who upon refreshing his memory, recognized them as old-time "guns" and "crooks" of St. Louis and Chicago, he and Page run them in as suspected felons. Upon being searched at the station house they showed up a considerable amount of money and nearly $300 in railroad tickets. A little inquiry among the ticket scalpers developed the fact that they had already sold tickets to Powell & Stedman, D. Granmann and other dealers. It is thought their stock in trade was accumulated at Springfield and Hopeville, Illinois, railroad offices at both these places having been recently robbed. They gave the names of McFarland, Wilson and McCameron, and will doubtless be called for as soon as their whereabouts are made public. An Important Capture.

The Grand Chapter.

The 32nd convocation of the Indiana grand chapter of Royal Arch Masons met yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at Masonic temple. Reuben Peden, grand high priest, presented his address. There are 95 chartered chapters, containing a membership numbering 5,000, represented in this body. The grand treasurer and grand secretary submitted their reports, after which officers for the ensuing year were selected as follows:

Grand high priest—Simeon I. Johnson, Jeffersonville.

Deputy high priest-Martin H. Rice, Indianapo-Ils.
Grand king—Thomas B. Long, Terre Haute.
Grand scribe—Addison D. Williams, Anderson.
Grand treasurer—Charles Fisher, Indianapolis.
Grand secretary—J. M. Brambell, Indianapolis.
The grand chapter then adjourned. This morning the newly elected officers were in field at 9 o'clock.

At the session of the grand lodge vesterday afternoon the salary of the G. W. C. T. was fixed at $600, of the G. W. S. at $400, and of the G. W. T. at $50. The installation of officers was postponed until this morning, the list being the same as published yesterday except that J. A. Moreman was elected chaplain instead of T. A. Friedley. The lodge declared its opposition to all candidates for office who were not temperance men. This morning a resolution was adopted strongly endorsing woman's suffrage. The little difficulty with J. G. Kingsbury was patched up and the lodge passed a resolution endorsing "The Home" newspaper published by that gentleman. Mrs. A. A. Brokbock, V. W. G. T., of the World, made a short speech, and sang "A Thousand Years." The lodge will conclude its work this afternoon.

Reward Distribution.

Reward Distribution.

The jury in the case of Charles Odle, John Morgan et al. vs. the Indiana national bank for $400 reward, for the recovery of $1,800 of the proceeds of the Southgate robbery, returned a verdict this morning in favor of Perry Tully, Caleb Dalton, John Tomlinson and Pleasant Atmond, leaving Morgan, Odle and Dr. Strong out in the cold. The doctor was represented by Messrs. Fishback and Byfield, who prayed that averdict might be rendered in his favor as a vindication, but the jury was evidently not in a vindicating humor and declined to bite. The doctor feels in need of a vindication now more than ever on account of recent grand jury action in Hendricks county.

Fast Horses.

The Indianapolis railroads are billing the trotting meeting, to be held in this city, very widely, and excursion trains will be run on all the roads. The fare will be reduced more than a half and the influx of strangers will doubtless be very large in consequence. The managers want it understood that they will have the meeting so conducted that no man need be afraid to bring his family. The sale of liquor on the grounds will be strictly prohibited. The secretary has not yet completed the list of entries as every mail brings in belated applications.

On An Impending Pamphlet.
To the Editor of the Indianapolis News:

To the Editor of the Indianapolis News:

Noticing in your paper that an enthusiastic audience at the city hospital called loudly for the publication of Dr. J. T. Boyd's lecture at that place in pamphlet form, my curiosity was excited to know the number and quality of the individuals composing his audience. I find apon inquiry that the audience, (a most appreciative one), was made up of the doctor's son and little daughter, two old men and a nurse, who, being persons of large philanthropy, did not vote to, monopolize a good thing, but opening their hearts have taken in the whole world to enjoy with them the delectable intellectual feast furnished by the modest and erudite doctor. Print it by all means. CORRY O'LANUS.

Cheering Prospects.

The week has been characterized by an increase in business over that of any previous one this fall. The merchants continue to report excellent sales, and the dry goods men especially note the welcome prospecity. The volume of business promises to be double that of last fall. New York streets have not presented so brisk and business-like an appearance since the panic, and her tradesmen have not been so much encouraged. They look for still greater benefits in the spring, arguing that by that time the money put in motion by the abundant crops will have reached the East. The universal comment in Broadway sales-rooms is that the bottom of trade stagnation has been knocked out, and that beter times have come to stay.

Such is the outlook, also, at J. A. Mc-Kenzie's Trade Palace, this city.
